In 1945 there were four anonymous bikers in Atlantic City who enjoyed the sport of riding motorcycles. After they crossed the bridge and paid toll they would do burn-outs in the oil at the base of the bridge that connected Philadelphia and New Jersey, originating the name "Old Burners". Every weekend Coffee, Cheyenne Boddie, Spartacus and Peter Gun rode to Philadelphia to party with Big Daddy, June and Maverick. Freddie Carter (Coffee) led the riders who all enjoyed stunt riding.
